

New Lenox Booster Club Advocating Fire Protection

Frankfort Mayor On County Tour

Mayor George C. Sangmeister of Frankfort is a very busy man now days campaigning for the Democratic nomination for the office of Circuit Court Clerk of Will County.

Mayor Sangmeister has done such splendid community work in Frankfort that his party's leaders selected him as one of their standard bearers. Mayor Sangmeister was instrumental in organizing a very modern fire department and in the purchase of a modern fire truck for Frankfort and in the building of a fine up-to-date municipal hall. In all the work done he has been a strong advocate of union labor and hired union men for the jobs he controlled or had a voice in.

If nominated, Mayor Sangmeister says he will wage an intensive campaign for election next fall.

Start Diphtheria Immunization Program In Mokena

The physicians in the Mokena community, working in cooperation with the Mokena Civic Association, the public health authorities and several other agencies plan to start a program of diphtheria immunization at an early date. For this reason it is interesting to discuss the subject so that the parents of non-immunized children may be informed of the situation.

Diphtheria is one of the most dangerous diseases which children may have or not as their parents choose, according to the State Department of Public Health.

There is danger of severe local epidemics in those communities where immunization is neglected. Children under school age, moreover, are in the greatest danger of diphtheria.

About one-half of all deaths from this disease in Illinois are among children under six years of age. The best time to immunize children is at about the ninth month of life. Failing that, every child should be immunized before he or she starts to school because the risks of infection are greatly increased at school.

Studies have revealed that very few parents are opposed to immunizing their children against diphtheria. Failure to do this seems to be more a matter of neglect. It is simply postponed from time to time. An opportunity for all parents to have their children immunized will be given soon in Mokena. Another article on the subject will appear in this paper next week.

Tentative dates for immunization at the Mokena school have been set for April 3rd and 24th.

Lyons-Brooks Caravan Visits Will County Towns

Thursday afternoon of this week the Richard J. Lyons for Governor and C. Wayland Brooks for U. S. Senator caravan visited the rural communities of Will County.

In the party were a number of the county candidates including Paul V. Wunder, candidate for office of Circuit Court clerk, James Burke, for state's attorney, the office he now holds, James Bell, county treasurer, Representative Lottie Holman O'Neal, Mrs. Carlson, and other workers. The caravan stopped at New Lenox at 1 p. m. and had dinner at the All Nations Dinner served at the New Lenox Methodist church. They arrived in Mokena at 1:30. All visited The News-Bulletin office. From here they went to Frankfort at 2 o'clock and from there to eastern Will County towns. In the evening a big rally was held in Joliet.

Mr. Lyons gave a address over station WFNH that evening, following which he returned to Joliet to join in the rally.

Surprised on Their Golden Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lind of Mokena were pleasantly surprised last Saturday evening by about 50 relatives in honor of their golden wedding anniversary.

A gorgeous supper was served at mid-night. A beautiful wedding cake graced the table. The honored couple was presented with a purse of money. Bunco was the diversion of the evening. The guests wished the couple many more happy anniversaries.

Mr. Lind was born in Orebor, Sweden and Mrs. Lind was born in Halsberg, Sweden.

They were married in Chicago on March 2nd, 1890 and resided in

To Organize Frankfort Township Rep. Woman's Club

A Frankfort Township Republican Women's rally will be held in Hatch Hall, Mokena on Monday evening, March 25th at 7:30 o'clock. All Republican candidates are invited to be present and each will be given three minutes in which to present themselves and their ideas.

It is expected to have a few numbers of entertainment and if it can be arranged, light refreshments will be served.

It is desirous to organize a Republican Women's Club in Frankfort Township, which will be a unit of the Will County Club which is headed by Mrs. Dorothy June as county president. Mrs. Wm. Semmler of Mokena and Mrs. J. M. Clark of Frankfort, Republican precinct committee women and their co-workers are calling this meeting and they are inviting herewith and urging every woman in the township to be present.

After the program a short meeting of the women will be held in which to decide upon organizing the Frankfort Township Republican Women's Club. Every woman voter, age makes no difference, or those who soon will be voters, are urged to attend this meeting and see in person those who are asking for your vote.

The men are not left out and they are asked to come and to see to it that their wives, daughters, and sisters attend this meeting. It is to be hoped they will stay and hear and see the program and speakers. It is quite important to see candidates in person, which helps one to decide how to vote.

Therefore, mark Monday, March 25th at 7:30 p. m., Hatch Hall in Mokena on your calendar as a date for an appointment not to be missed.

Mr. Lind has been in the employ of the International Harvester Co., for forty years.

Pretty Wedding Solemnized In Henry Holm Home

A very pretty wedding was solemnized last Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Holm of Homer, when their daughter, Miss Vivian L., became the bride of Mr. Owen Maue, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Maue of Mokena.

At high noon, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by the bride's niece, Mrs. Russell, Lauffer, the bridal party took their place before a bower of plants and flowers in the living room. The bride approached the altar on the arm of her brother Everett, where they were met by the Rev. Adolph Lach, pastor of the Christ Lutheran church of Orland Park, who officiated, using the single ring ceremony.

The bride was lovely in a floor length gown of white silk lace over white satin, with a finger tip veil which was caught at the head with orange blossoms. She carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations and pink and white sweet peas. They were unattended.

The bride's mother shoulder corsage was of white sweet peas, and the groom's mother's was of pink roses.

The home was decorated in green and white. In the dining room where dinner was served, the table was covered with white lace over green. A four-tiered wedding cake graced the center, the top tier holding a miniature bride and groom standing underneath a white wedding bell, which also decorated the wedding cake of the bride's sister, Mrs. Alice Froemke when she was married twenty-six years ago. Only the immediate members of the two families witnessed the ceremony and were dinner guests.

At two-thirty in the afternoon, a reception was held which was attended by eighty relatives and friends who came to wish the young couple well, on their life's journey together.

Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Maue left by motor for a three week's trip to the south. Upon their return, they will go to house-keeping on the Maue homestead, near Mokena.

The groom, after graduating from Mokena schools and the Joliet township high school, was graduated in 1937 from a four year agricultural course at the University of Illinois. He is a member of the Acacia fraternity.

The bride was graduated from the Lockport high school and has been employed in Chicago for the past three years.

RED CROSS WILL HOLD BOARD MEETING

A board meeting of the Will County Chapter of the American Red Cross was held last Tuesday at Chapter headquarters in Joliet. Mrs. Raymond McGuire, local Branch chairman of Mokena attended. The most important subject of discussion was the annual meeting to be held in April. It was decided to have this meeting on April 25th without a guest speaker. Each chairman will give a report of their work done for the year in their particular field.

Volunteer groups were asked for, in various communities, to make clothing, hospital gowns, layettes etc. Request was made for such a sewing group in Mokena.

Everyone was more than pleased with the result of the annual roll call as it far surpassed any year since the World War days.

The Episcopal Men's Club known as the New Lenox Booster Club met at Emily Hall Friday evening. Due to illness the president, Leonard A. Rought, was absent and Darwin G. Cooper presided.

The first business in order of the evening was the election of officers which had been postponed from the December meeting. Mr. Rought by proxy, informed the members that he did not choose to succeed himself for president.

R. Melvin Whitaker, prominent young business man of New Lenox was elected president for the ensuing year. John J. Spuehler was re-elected secretary and treasurer of the club. Following the election of officers an initiation of candidates was held and three new candidates, Stanley Ekdahl, Herbert Senning and Mr. Holt were initiated and accepted into the club.

At the general business meeting following, Mr. Whitaker, chairman of the committee on posting street signs, made a report, stating that thru the efforts of the club's committee and with the cooperation of the state officials, speed signs have been erected on the main highway U. S. 30 on both approaches to New Lenox. This was the first step of the organization and the committee is arranging to have additional signs relative to observance of traffic speeds on other streets in the village and signs such as warning to motorists and as to districts in the school zones where special care should be observed in the protection of school children. He reports that in this connection the committee is very active and at the next meeting a further report will be made of their progress.

In addition to discussion of street signs, much interest was manifested relative to protecting the approach-

Young Men With Ambition Were Aided by Depression, Youth Expert Maintains

CHICAGO.—Take it from an expert—

The high school or college graduate is all wrong if he claims there's no opportunity for young men in the business and professional world. To the contrary, the depression has really produced new opportunities for youngsters with ideas.

This is the decision of Felix B. Streyckmans, a young man who is making young men his life's work. Streyckmans studied this phenomenon as editor of a magazine specializing in young men, and he's concluded that the depression merely wiped out a lot of old, impractical ideas.

It left a clear field ahead for new and youthful thinkers.

Now Streyckmans has assembled his opinions in a new book called "Today's Young Men," published by Reilly and Lee of Chicago. It lists the accomplishments of several score American youngsters, most of whom were up against the wall 10 years ago, and all of whom are successful today. It's Horatio Alger brought up to date.

Broadway's Sign King.

Douglas Leigh is one of Streyckmans' most unusual young men. At 30, Leigh is the sign king of Broadway. He owns more of Broadway's biggest and most striking electric signs than all the others combined, yet only seven years ago he arrived in New York from Birmingham with $8 in his pocket—and no prospect of a job.

Leigh figured the signs he saw along Broadway were bright and clever enough, but they didn't impress him with the cigarettes, automobiles, coffee or whatever they were supposed to be selling. So, on March 4, 1933 (the day of the bank holiday) he went into business. By applying individuality and novel treatment to this unique business, he's made more than a million dollars.

ORSON WELLES—At 24, he has behind him already a long record of achievement as actor and producer.

A young man who sees Leigh's signs every day is William McChesney Martin, who at 31 is president of the New York Stock exchange. He assumed this highly responsible financial post in the summer of 1938 as a result of reorganization designed to bring Wall Street's operations out from behind a cloud of ill repute. Though he was born of a well-to-do St. Louis family, and although his father is president of the St. Louis Federal Reserve bank, it takes more than family connections to go uphill the way Bill Martin did it.

Recalls Colonial Spirit.

In "Today's Young Men," Streyckmans points out that the pioneering spirit of today is reminiscent of that which featured early America.

"The young man of today," he says, "being a pioneer in the ruins of the last few decades, is first cousin to the pioneer of Colonial days. The outstanding men then were young—and the outstanding young men whose careers I have studied are closer to them in spirit than they are to their own fathers or their fathers' fathers."

Thomas Wingate of Amarillo, Texas, is a splendid example of this spirit. Seven years ago, when Tom was 17, his father died and left him a $165,000 soft-drink works. The city's oldsters shook their heads, and they had every reason to. Imagine trying to sell soft drinks in a drought-stricken area just when prohibition was being repealed!

But Tom, realizing he couldn't use conventional methods, won his employees' good will by raising their salaries and promising Christmas bonuses. They went to work with a will, and the Wingate bottling works got back on its feet. Last summer Tom refused an offer of more than a million dollars cash for his business. How's that for a 24-year-old?

Young Poultry King.

There's a somewhat similar case near Houston, Texas. The hero of this story is 22-year-old Dewey Stringer, blond, and slightly built,

WILLIAM M. MARTIN—Only 31, he is the highly successful president of the New York stock exchange.

THEOS BERNARD—30-year-old American who was the first white man ever to become a Buddhist monk. He spent several years in Tibet, visiting and photographing places no white man had ever seen.

who inherited a large poultry farm when his father died four years ago. In that period he's become such an authority and so successful that the home economics bureau of the United States department of agriculture cites him as one of America's outstanding poultry raisers. He produces a half million of the country's "best" eggs every month.

Actually, the most successful youngster listed in "Today's Young Men" is 22-year-old William Brannan, who graduated from Beloit college in Wisconsin last year. In college he was a varsity wrestler, a member of the debate team and glee club, an accordionist and an excellent student. Last summer, after he finished college, he began selling insurance. With six months to go it now seems certain that he will top the $100,000 mark in his first year. Unusual? Perhaps not, except that Bill Brannan is blind.

Newsman Who Were Successful.

"Today's Young Men" lists quite a few writers. Two of them are Robert Kintner and Joseph Alsop Jr., 30 and 31, respectively, whose "Capital Parade" column from Washington is a highly successful syndicated feature. Both started on the New York Herald-Tribune. They've made a success of their column by working hard, gathering unusual information and presenting it from a mature and well-reasoned viewpoint.

Bill Rogers, the 27-year-old son of Will Rogers, the late movie comedian, bought the Beverly Hills Citizen when he was 23 years old. In the past five years he's become one of the most influential journalists in the West, not because he is Will Rogers' son but because he's become a highly successful publisher, both financially and editorially.

There are many other young men in the editorial field. Paul Smith, 30, is managing editor of the San Francisco Chronicle. He's served on the farm security board and the farm tenancy commission, and is credited with settling a hopelessly deadlocked San Francisco warehousemen's strike.

Streyckmans insists that his young men have become successful largely because they didn't know the balmy days of 1920-30, and therefore had nothing to lament.

Industrial Products Are 'Dressed Up' to Spur Greater Sales

NEW YORK.—Under the magic wand of an Indiana boy, who made the big city sit up and listen, a strange mixture of science, engineering and art is helping to fit the luxuries of modern living to the pocketbooks of Mr. and Mrs. America.

High in his modern office, in one of the busiest sections of New York city, Walter Dorwin Teague, who was born in Pendleton, Ind., is taking industrial products apart, analyzing them, and handing them back with new clothes, new color and in a majority of cases, at a cheaper price to the consumer.

He is the pioneer of industrial design, the "tailor" of manufactured products. So heartily has industry taken Teague's designs to its bosom that he is retained by several of the largest corporations of the country just to keep their products and business equipment well dressed.

"Good design," Teague says, "is design for maximum functional efficiency."

Therein lies the success story of a score of products, some originally designed, some redesigned by Teague, who came to New York to study painting, found his talents better adapted to decorative advertising display and typography, where he became a leader. Then, bowing to the wishes of his clients, he turned to industrial design. Since that time he has designed everything from cameras and stoves to huge exhibit buildings at the world's fair, where he is one of the members of the board of design.

Second-choice commitments, if Roosevelt doesn't run, are complicating the political situation . . . Carter Field presents two little riddles in the game of national politics . . . United States government is giving every encouragement to makers of planes.

WASHINGTON.—"Of course I won't be here this time next year," President Roosevelt smiled to a dinner partner recently. The lady was convinced, but her husband wasn't, when she told him about it later.

"They'll draft him," he said glumly—glumly because he is one of the growing group that hopes Roosevelt will name him as his successor, if and when.

But a lot of people are operating on the theory that Roosevelt really does mean to take himself out of it, and stay out. Which explains the enormous interest right now in second-choice commitments.

Men and women who are going to be delegates—and the bosses in some instances who will control delegates—are being importuned all over the country to give second-choice commitments—promises that if Roosevelt doesn't choose to run, they will vote for this or that candidate.

Curiously enough, the mere growth of this pledging contributes not to the logic that Roosevelt will not run, but to the logic that he will. It must be admitted that the logic all along has been that Roosevelt would run, though many of the insiders insist that he will not.

Second-Choice Commitments Closing In on Situation

But this second-choice commitment development is closing in on the situation. It is an extraordinary brake on Roosevelt's hoped-for domination of the convention if he isn't going to take the nomination. For instance, the Georgia delegates, according to present intentions, will be for Roosevelt if he runs. But if he does not run the plan is to go to Cordell Hull. The Massachusetts delegates will be for Roosevelt first, but for James A. Farley second.

The point is that when Roosevelt says he will not serve again—assuming he should say this—but that the man he wants chosen to carry on his policies is Robert H. Jackson, or whoever, the Georgia delegates will say to the messenger: "Sorry, but we are pledged to Hull if F. D. R. doesn't take it." The Indiana delegates will say: "Sorry, but we are pledged to Paul McNutt if Roosevelt isn't a candidate."

Meanwhile, Tommy Corcoran, Ben Cohen, Bob Jackson and others of the inner circle are working feverishly to get uninstructed delegates, but men who are for Roosevelt. In fact, some highly placed New Dealers are sure that they would not be quite so active if the White House had not given them the green light. But they are making very little progress as against the second-choice commitment situation. Nor is it very likely that their efforts would be successful in this direction.

The reason is very practical. Most of the men and women who will be delegates, or who will control delegates, are interested primarily in keeping the Democratic party in power for four more years. Most of them care only in an academic way about any particular New Deal policy.

Wadsworth Rejects New Post Office for District

When a congressman opposes a federal building in his own district it's like a man biting a dog, but it is characteristic of James W. Wadsworth, now a member of the house and for 12 years a senator, that he wouldn't think of it as of any interest.

What happened was that a constituent wrote Wadsworth that the government was about to build a new post office building in Mt. Morris, N. Y., just a few miles from where Wadsworth has lived all his life. This constituent said he thought it was a waste of government money, for he didn't think Mt. Morris needed a new post office.

Neither did Wadsworth. So he wrote Postmaster General James A. Farley and told him so, adding that "Mt. Morris doesn't need a new post office any more than I need a new silk hat, and you ought to see my old one."

Then Wadsworth sent a carbon of his letter to Farley along with his reply to his constituent. But later the same day, as is his wont, he told local newspaper correspondents from western New York that he didn't know a thing that was worth printing!

Of course that letter to Farley was too good to keep, so the chap who originally protested to Wad-worth showed it to everybody he saw, including, eventually, a local correspondent for the Buffalo Evening News. So it was printed, and the first the correspondents who talk to Wadsworth every day knew about it was when the edition of the News containing the story reached Washington.

"You'll never learn," one of them said to Wadsworth, bitterly. "No wonder Bob Wagner retired you from the senate."

Then There's the Case of Cummings and Alcatraz

But if that's hard to understand, how about this one. Remember how proud Homer S. Cummings was of Alcatraz? He thought it solved a real problem in dealing with desperate gangsters and other criminals. Along came Frank Murphy, whose sensibilities seemed to be shocked. To take its place he wanted a prison in the farm belt of the Middle West, with the prisoners allowed to get a bit of sunshine as they worked in the fields instead of getting prison pallor in the fogs of San Francisco bay.

Cummings read about this in the newspapers and rushed for the White House. It so happened that he was the only out-and-out third-term booster among the Democratic leaders of Connecticut, especially as Senator Francis T. Maloney, who comes up for re-election this year, thought the third-term idea would defeat him for re-election in Connecticut, however it might work out in other parts of the country.

When Cummings came out of the White House he was smiling. He told newspaper men that they could be sure Alcatraz would remain.

Murphy kept a committee studying where to locate its successor, but now Robert H. Jackson is attorney general. Within a very short time of his assuming his place as head of the department he decided that this committee was just wasting its time.

So Alcatraz will stick. But now comes the pay-off. The Connecticut Democracy decides to send a delegation to the Democratic National convention at Chicago instructed for James A. Farley, and no such strings as the Massachusetts Democrats put on their delegates. The Bay state boys are to be for Farley if Roosevelt doesn't want it. The Nutmeggers are for Farley regardless! Riddle me that one, as John L. Lewis says!

U. S. Government Encourages Manufacturers of Planes

With one eye on national defense, but the other on the desire to help Britain and France in the war, the government is getting ready to give every encouragement to rapid expansion of America's airplane-producing industry.

The efforts revolve around Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., who has been given the triple responsibility of co-ordinating Allied purchasing, rationalizing United States production, and seeing that the tax policy puts no brake on expansion.

Military and political importance of this program is obvious when it is realized that on the basis of only the expansion already under way, our aircraft production by the end of the year will be nearly 2,000 units a month—equal to the most favorable reports considered reliable as to German capacity. The exact extent of the new plans is not known, but persistent rumors of orders nearly tripling the present $650,000,000 backlog, all to be delivered within 18 months or so, indicate that production will have to go far enough above the 2,000 figure to put Uncle Sam far ahead of any other country.

Morgenthau's first move toward smoothing out the flow of aircraft production was an attack on the engine bottleneck. The big problem here has been the inability to get machine tools. The machine-tool industry has been swamped with orders, foreign and domestic, and has been handling nearly everything on a first come, first served basis.

As a result of Morgenthau's conferences, the machine-tool industry will now work on a priority system intended to give aircraft makers first call on tools.

Taxation and profit-limitation policies raise no serious obstacles to expansion for domestic war planes.

Expansion Is Paid for By Foreign Purchasers

Expansion for military export is somewhat different. All this expansion is being paid for directly by the foreign purchasers. In fact, the Allies are quite aggrieved because United States manufacturers are virtually insisting on getting free plants as part of their contracts.

The usual procedure is for the British and French to make a loan covering the cost of the new plant to the manufacturer. The loss is charged off, as deliveries are made, out of deliberately inflated prices.

If the treasury department wanted to be nasty, of course, it could treat this transaction as a gift and tax it accordingly. Actually, the treasury will take the deal at its face value. The department has already made a ruling, in the case of the Atlas Powder company, that such money "will not constitute taxable income to Atlas for the reason that such a transaction would be a loan evidenced by a note."

Easter Bunny Stays As White as Snow

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

STUFFED toys of oil cloth or water-proof bath curtain material are something mothers have been dreaming about. Just wipe them off with a damp cloth to keep them fresh and clean.

The Easter bunny shown here is 11 inches long. He is white, hand-stitched in heavy pink thread and has pink bead or button eyes. Make your own pattern for him by following the diagram. Rule paper into 1-inch squares; number them; then draw the pattern outlines. Cut two body pieces; four ear pieces and a 2-inch strip to be used between the two sides of the body. Interline the ears to make them stand up. Join all raw edges, as shown, leaving an opening in the body for stuffing tightly with cotton or bits of soft cloth; then finish sewing.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book No. 2 contains numerous gift and bazaar items, including a doll's wardrobe; men's ties; purses; baby's bassinet; 32 pages in all.

In the Shadows

As a song bird is shut up in a dark place to learn a new song which it could not have learned in the light, so in our withdrawal into the shadow we are to be taught some new sweet song in the night which we may sing ever after in the ears of sad and weary ones.—J. R. Miller.

FIGHT COLDS

by helping nature build up your cold-fighting resistance

If you suffer one cold right after another, here's sensational news! Mrs. Elizabeth Vickery writes: "I used to catch colds very easily. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery helped to strengthen me just splendidly. I ate better, had more stamina, and was troubled very little with colds."

This great medicine, formulated by a practicing physician, helps combat colds this way: (1) It stimulates the appetite. (2) It promotes flow of gastric juices. Thus you eat more; your digestion improves; your body gets greater nourishment which helps nature build up your cold-fighting resistance.

So successful has Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery been that over 30,000,000 bottles have already been used. Proof of its remarkable benefits. Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from your druggist today. Don't suffer unnecessarily from colds.

Bend or Break

There are two kinds of weakness, that which breaks and that which bends.—J. R. Lowell.

College Research Given Credit For Speeding Building Trades

WASHINGTON.—Prospects of a 15 per cent increase in residential construction in 1940 over 1939 add significance to the contribution made to the building industry by research laboratories of American colleges and universities during the past decade.

These research activities have made it possible to get more for each building dollar and effect economies of about $180,000,000 on the nation's annual home construction bill, according to a survey by the National Home Builders' bureau.

The survey attaches "more than ordinary significance" to the value of new discoveries by technicians in institutions of higher learning. Although only a comparatively small portion of the money expended on industrial research is available to campus chemists, physicists and technical experts, their contribution to economic recovery has been far greater than generally realized, the report stated.

Farmer Aided by Research.

The work done by agricultural colleges and university experimental groups in aiding the farmer is perhaps more widely recognized. Modern methods of crop rotation, more diversified use of farm products, intensified ways of cultivation have all benefited from the activities in campus laboratories.

However, college research has also developed such aids to better building as a new method of adhering structural glass to concrete to form a single glass stone unit, improved weather conditioning of the home for both winter and summer comfort, a wide variety of plastics, better paints and lacquers.

It has been estimated conservatively by building engineers that research in academic laboratories during the past 10 years into new and improved uses for building materials has cut six cents off every dollar spent for such products.

Negroes Use Odd Cures

To Combat 'Miseries'

ATLANTA.—Southern farm Negroes afflicted with a "misery" have some unique medicines. Among them:

Neuralgia can be cured with a ball of camphor gum tied about the neck and resting on the chest.

Colds can be routed with a small bag of tea placed on the eye.

For hoarseness, try a piece of well-chewed horse-radish.

EAST and WEST

BY TALBOT MUNDY

• TALBOT MUNDY—WNU SERVICE

THE STORY THUS FAR

Captain Carl Norwood has been sent from his native England to the Kadur River district in India, along with his indispensable manservant, Moses O'Leary, soldier of fortune. Norwood's job is to survey the district to determine whether a valuable secret diamond mine belongs to the temple priests or to the ruler, the Maharajah of Kadur. Norwood calls on the British Residency to pay his initial respects. On his way he catches a glimpse of two women in a palace carriage, one of whom is young and beautiful. The other woman he knows to be the Maharanees of Kadur. O'Leary later tells him that the young woman is an American girl named Lynn Harding, who with her aunt, Mrs. Deborah Harding, is a guest at the palace. On a sightseeing tour Mrs. Harding sprains an ankle, and sends to the palace for aid. Prince Rundhia, handsome, spoiled nephew of the rulers, comes to her rescue and takes her back to the palace where he meets Lynn. At a banquet that night in the palace, attended by Captain Norwood, Mrs. Harding takes one of the native doctor's pills, and becomes violently ill.

Lynn laughed: "That's a testimonial for me! But thank you, I'll take care of Auntie."

"No," said the doctor. He caught Rundhia's eye. Rundhia came to his rescue and made signals to the Maharanees, who wanted nothing better than to have Lynn under her own roof.

"Lynn, dear, please do as the doctor tells you. Please, please."

Auntie groaned and protested that it was a shame to inflict Lynn on the Maharanees, but she was overruled. She was carried out on an improvised litter and rushed to the guest-house, where Lynn's belongings were collected by the servants and conveyed to the palace.

CHAPTER V

Rundhia was puzzled and Lynn knew it. She enjoyed it. It was cool and beautiful beneath the moonlit trees in the garden.

"You are the strangest mixture of intelligence and innocence that I have ever met," said Rundhia. "You are in love with all this. You are thrilled by the exotic strangeness. But it's all old stuff to me, remember. I'm a babe in the woods, too, in a certain sense. I'm as lost as you are. Things and places don't make life worth living. It's the people in the places, and the things they do together. If you loved me and I loved you—"

"But neither of us does," Lynn interrupted. "We are East and West. Europe delights you because you can't ever really understand it. And the East enraptures me for the same reason."

"So we've that much in common," said Rundhia. "Let me tell you something else we have in common. We like each other."

"Do we?"

"Yes. One would have to be blind, deaf, demented, not to like you. What's wrong with me?"

Lynn's defensive tactic was a thousand times more shrewd than Auntie would dream of giving her credit for.

"Well, for instance, why do you dislike Captain Norwood?"

"For the same reason that he doesn't like me," said Rundhia. "Cherchez la femme. Thank the father and mother who bred him, he's only an Engineer. If he were Cavalry, I might feel jealous. Lynn, I love you."

"How many women have you said that to?"

"Hundreds. But I lied to all the others."

"I have sometimes had to lie to Auntie. But I'm not nearly as practiced a liar as you must be. Let's be truthful."

"I am telling you the truth. I have always thought myself a cynic. I didn't know I had a heart until I met you. I have found and lost it in the same moment. It is yours. What will you do with it?"

His arm crept around her. He hardly knew how she slipped away from him. She waltzed away. She ran along the path, her arms extended to embrace the moonlit luxury of hue and view and perfumed flowers. By the time he overtook her, her retort was ready:

"Perhaps you don't like men with red hair?"

"I am looking," he answered, "at your hair. I want to bury my hands in it, bathe my face in it, breathe the—"

"Borax! I washed it and the water's terrible!"

She escaped him again. Her black pajamas vanished into shadow; she became a beautiful, disembodied head in a golden aureole that asked:

"Is Captain Norwood married? I didn't ask him."

"Well, why didn't you ask him?"

"I didn't care."

"Good!" said Rundhia. "I'm going to make you care about something else. Come along. I'll behave. Come this way."

He led her up steps to the top of the ancient garden wall. There was a summerhouse on the wall, a sort of kiosk; it had been swept and provided with cushions by a servant who crouched in shadow. Rundhia ordered the servant away. He went and lurked at the foot of the steps, but Rundhia shouted at him and he fled. Rundhia led Lynn into the open-sided kiosk.

"You have promised," she said, "to behave."

"Do you believe men's promises when they're in love? Are you as naive as that?"

"Yes. Don't be silly. Let us look at the view."

"Look at me."

His eyes were hardly less fiery than the glowing end of his cigarette. They made Lynn's flesh tingle. He threw away the cigarette.

"Lynn, you romantic girl, this scene enchants you because love has stolen on you unaware. Neither of us until now has ever known what love is."

"Do you think you know now?" she retorted.

"You know I know it. You are cruel."

"I wish you'd sit farther away," she interrupted. "Why don't you make love to your own countrywomen?"

"There isn't in all India such a lovely girl as you are."

"How do you know? It's true, isn't it, that most of them are kept in seclusion and you're not allowed to see them? Is that why you make love to me? Why not burgle a zennana?"

"Lynn," he said, "I don't make love. I am love. And you also. We are love itself, as a musician becomes music. Why waste the glorious hours?"

"What do you know about music?" she retorted. "Can you sing Indian songs?"

"Yes, love songs! I play the guitar."

"You can? What fun! Why not get it? There couldn't be a more perfect place for singing than this garden wall in moonlight."

"Hello!" he remarked.

Rundhia sensed that he had cast his fly too boldly. She wasn't hooked. She needed more subtle persuasion.

He shouted to the servant to fetch the guitar. There was no answer; the servant had taken him too strictly at his word, he was out of earshot. Rundhia shouted again and again. He swore under his breath. Then he governed his anger and smiled at Lynn:

"Will you wait here if I go and get it?"

"Yes, but—"

"What?"

"You look murderous. Don't whip the servant!"

His undercover man was waiting for him in the usual place, by the gate in the wall that separated the Maharajah's palace from Rundhia's—an unimportant-looking but peculiarly unmeek Hindu, who spoke in a low voice without preliminary gestures of respect:

"The priests have learned of Captain Norwood's arrival. They sent me to speak with his Eurasian spy, O'Leary, who is a reptile. O'Leary has already detected the opening of the mine."

Rundhia thought swiftly, and spoke slowly: "Go and tell the priests that Captain Norwood is here to line his own pocket. Say he is in debt and seeks an opportunity to pay his debts. His secret report will be in favor of the highest bidder. But don't say you heard it from me. Say O'Leary was drunk and you heard it from him. Make it perfectly clear to the priests that any other officer than Norwood would be scrupulously fair, so let them think about it."

Then Rundhia found a servant in the garden of his own palace and sent him running to fetch the guitar.

The palace front gate clanged behind Norwood. The sullen sentry stood at ease, then easy and resumed his snooze. Norwood turned his horse along the road by the palace wall, riding slowly because the sais was following on foot. He had ridden about fifty yards to a curve in the road when O'Leary stepped forth from a shadow. He didn't look like O'Leary. He was wearing a turban, and dressed like a dripping wet, dirty Hindu of no caste or ostensible occupation. Norwood drew rein and listened, watching the road for pedestrians.

"I didn't stable the mare in the city. She's stable in camp. I'll need her later."

"What for?"

"As soon as I'm dressed decent again, I'll go back to the bazaar. I told a yarn about coming back to camp for more money. I'm going to need it."

"What happened?"

"Plenty. I was right about Noor Mahlam. They've ditched him. So I did too. He was only ground bait. He talked too much, then tried to have me knifed to stop me talking. They'd a trap set for me and I walked straight into it. A woman. I'll tell you about her later; she'd fill a dictionary."

"Never mind about the woman. What happened?"

"Nothing happened there. It couldn't. I left your mare tied up to the veranda railing, military saddle and all, and your initials on the bridle. So they couldn't take chances. And I could. And I did."

"That's enough about you. What happened?"

"Kindergarten stuff. Confidence game. The woman's bully flattered me. I knew the woman's sister in Lahore, and he said the woman's sister'd given me a rep for being smarter than most, and a man o' my word. Then he introduced me to the woman. She's all honey and poison. Sister my eye. Two words, and I knew she was lying about that."

"Never mind her lies, or whose sister she is. How much truth did she tell you?"

"Not much, barring that I'm the most exciting man she'd ever seen. She was true enough excited, so I knew the bully was listening in; and he weren't her proper bully neither; he was someone who'd been rung in on her, and she scared o' him and not used to his ways. She said there'd be a thousand rupees for me if I'd act discreet."

"Whose thousand rupees?" asked Norwood.

"Trust your Moses O'Leary. I asked her that quick. She said it was Prince Rundhia's thousand rupees. So I knew it wasn't."

"What does she want you to do?"

"She told me a mess o' lies about Prince Rundhia having quarrelled with the temple Brahmins, and him wanting to get back at 'em, to spite 'em. She told me, and I acted surprised, that there's a diamond mine in the temple area. There's a thousand rupees for me if I persuade you to run your survey line slap through the temple area, so that the mine will belong to the Maharajah instead of the temple priests."

"What did you tell her?"

"I said you're easy, but you're honest. I said I'll have to find some way of artfully deceiving you if you're to do what's needed. I said I'd have to look into it, and I made her tell me where the mine is and how to get a look at it. She came clean."

"How did she know?"

"She'd been told. And she was out of her depth already. She wanted word with the bully, and she tried to get me to stay where I was. But I thought of the bay mare standing outside in the alley, and she fidgety, and you fond o' the mare and liable to find fault with me if she should come to harm. And I guessed it 'ud be wise to look into the woman's story first."

"You'd better leave that woman and her bully guessing, and show me the mine. Where is it?"

O'Leary pointed: "Two hours from now, when the moon's about there, I can guide you to a place where you can see along under the apron of water."

"Very well, O'Leary. Which way did you come?"

"Short cut. Don't you try it. Horse might break a leg."

"All right, I'll follow the road. Meet me in camp."

O'Leary vanished. Norwood had ridden another fifty yards when he heard angry shouting, several times repeated. He wasn't sure, but he thought he also heard a girl's voice. He rode forward slowly and then, a bit alarmed by the ensuing silence, stirred his horse to a canter. He drew rein, looking upward at Lynn, not much more than two or three minutes after Rundhia had left her. She was sitting in full moonlight on top of the wall, on a cushion, with one foot hanging over the wall and her back against the kiosk.

"Hello!" he remarked. "Did Rundhia leave you all alone here?"

"He said he'd come back."

"Well, he'll keep that promise. How well do you know him?"

"I met him for the first time this evening."

"Like him?"

"Shouldn't I?"

"At your age, there is danger in exotic likes and dislikes."

"I'm twenty-two."

"You don't look it. I had guessed you as eighteen. However, no doubt you know how to take care of yourself among men of your own race. I'm taking it for granted that you're a nice girl with a sense of humor but a bit rebellious against certain sorts of restraint. All this is new, and you're enjoying it. You like the Indian setting, and the novelty and the moonlight and all that stuff."

"Don't you?"

"Yes. And I like you. I would not like to hear of you making a mess of your life for the sake of a spot of excitement. You don't understand India. You don't understand Rundhia."

A shadow moved. Someone chuckled:

"Doesn't she?"

Rundhia loomed on the wall with a guitar in his hand. He smiled down at Norwood. The moonlight shone on his teeth.

"We were reaching a beautiful understanding," said Rundhia. "Are you on your way to camp? Well, it's a grand night for a ride. Sorry you're tired and sleepy."

Norwood eased his horse a little nearer to the wall. He gave the reins to the sais. In another moment he was standing upright on the saddle, with his head within six inches of the top of the wall:

"I am not so sleepy as perhaps I look," he answered. "Give me a hand up, Rundhia."

Lynn watched. This was something altogether new in her experience. Rundhia hesitated. Moonlight betrayed him. Rundhia felt tempted to refuse. But he hadn't the iron. He could have scared the horse and made Norwood look ridiculous. But he hadn't the nerve. Lynn felt sorry for him. With a shrug he handed the guitar to her, in order to use both hands to help Norwood scramble up the wall.

"You weren't invited," said Rundhia.

Norwood stared. "No. I noticed it. Can you stum on that thing?"

Lynn spoke with all the malice she could put into her voice:

"You like music, Captain Norwood? I supposed your line was engineering and ordering people about."

Zoo Animals Turn Popular Beliefs to Fables

An elephant's memory is no longer than its tail. Humming birds, so fragile that they seem winged insects, are greedier than pigs. Monkeys prefer popcorn to bananas. The house cat is more cruel than a beast of the jungle.

In fact, name any popular belief about animals and it's a good two to one bet that it is wrong.

That's the conclusion of experts after actual observation at the Chicago Zoological park at Brookfield. Consider the elephant, most maligned of the animal kingdom.

He is supposed to live the 969 years of Methuselah, but instead lives only the three score and ten of man. The female is said to breed at the age of 40 or 50; in reality, she breeds at six and eight years. Her pregnancy is said to endure seven years; as a matter of fact, it is 19 months, which is short enough, considering the size of her offspring.

And the elephant's memory! Legend says it is enduring, tenacious. He can remember an injury today and he will repay you in kind 15 years later. Brookfield officials say this is applesauce.

An elephant's memory probably is not as good as that of other animals," Robert Bean, assistant director and curator of mammals, declared.

"I never heard anyone who worked with them say their memory amounted to anything. Take Honey and Tembo, the baby elephants that Christoph Schulz captured and brought here.

"When he found Honey, she was a baby, half starved and wandering in the jungle. He brought her here, feeding her by bottle, and she would follow him everywhere. When he left, she tried to trumpet, but when he came back eight months later she didn't remember him at all. Schulz," he added, "was very disappointed."

Elephants, too, are said to be afraid of mice. The truth is, Mr. Bean says, that they ignore them, making the pachyderm house at Brookfield the hardest in the park to free of mice. Elephants like cats, however, and allow them free access to the stables. The only animal most of them despise, Mr. Bean says, is man.

CALVARY: TRIUMPH THROUGH SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 27:33-50.
GOLDEN TEXT—He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.—Isaiah 53:3.

At Calvary, reverent and thoughtful readers of God's Word stand speechless, and confess themselves to be powerless to explain or to expound the awe-inspiring story, and yet just because it is such a story, because on that cross the divine Son of God gave Himself in sacrificial atonement for sin, we must do our utmost to understand it, to explain it, and certainly to declare it to all mankind. For when He who knew no sin became sin for us, it was for our sin that He died. Here alone do we find redemption.

We approach this scene therefore with reverence, and with the prayer that we may so present the dying Saviour to dying men that some may believe and be saved. We center our thoughts around three expressions taken from the text.

I. "They Crucified Him."

All of the gospel stories are remarkably reticent when they speak of the cross. Details of surrounding events are given, but when they speak of the cross itself, they can only say that He was crucified. Let us look at the One who hung on that sacred tree, for He is the Saviour of the world. Refusing the stupefying potion (v. 34) and facing death fully conscious, we hear Him crying out of the darkness which covered all the land, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" That cry indicates the depth to which our Saviour went for us.

Does it not seem that the Father in that darkest moment of history turned His back upon the One who knowing no sin Himself had become sin for us? And yet we know that it was God who hung upon the tree, God the Son. Here is divine mystery, the meaning of which we cannot fathom, but we know that it was for us.

Then came the cry with the loud voice, "It is finished!" This was not the death of the languishing martyr. The Son of God, having wrought out redemption on the cross, cried out in powerful tones of victory, "It is finished!" and yielded up His spirit.

II. "They Watched Him."

Soldiers, priests, the two thieves, the women—how different was the purpose and the spirit of their watching.

The soldiers had made sport of Him and mocked Him in the palace. They took a passing curious interest in the crucifixion. They gambled over His garments, and finally settled down to perform their duty as guards with stolid indifference. How much of humanity is just like that!

The priests who professed to know about God and His Word stand out in appalling wickedness and ignorance. Being members of the highest and noblest of callings, they fell when they sinned to the lowest depths.

Of the two thieves, one believed and the other railed at our Lord (Luke 23:39, 40). The cross has ever since been the dividing line, part of humanity turning there to life eternal, the rest going on its railing way to destruction.

The women waited. No doubt they were perplexed and troubled in heart, but they stood faithfully by until His precious body was in the grave. We read of no apostle who did as much, and we give all honor to the faithful women.

III. "He Trusted in God."

This was the sarcastic taunt of the priests. "When the King was hanging upon the cross and the interpreters of religion, the priests, misinterpreted God, there was a great silence. God's noninterference is the first thing that impresses one as the story is read, but that is not all the story. It was not wholly noninterference. 'From the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land until the ninth hour.' That seems to have been the act of God. It would seem that in infinite tenderness God wrapped the land in darkness in the hour of His Son's supreme suffering" (G. Campbell Morgan). We also read in verse 51 that the veil of the temple was torn from top to bottom, opening the way for all men in Christ to enter the Holy of Holies.

"He trusted God." Yes, even to the sacrifice of Himself in death. Because He could not save Himself (v. 42) in thus doing the will of God the Father, He did save others. The scoffing priests told the truth in spite of their wicked purpose to falsify. "They crucified Him," "they watched Him," but "He trusted God" and became the Saviour of the world.

How Great and How Wondrous

How great are His signs! and how mighty are His wonders! His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation.—Daniel 4:3

SUNSHINE 4-H CLUB ELECTS

A meeting of the Sunshine 4-H Club was held Sunday, March 10 in the home of Pearl and Dorothy Wille. The following officers were elected: President, Pearl Wille; vice president, Luella Hoyer; Secretary-treasurer, Bernice Bettenhausen; assist. leader, Marion Keuch; recreation leaders, Dorothy and Laura Wille and reporter, Bernilda Stuckey.

A brief summary of last year's work was given. Members were appointed to attend several county 4-H meetings. Some of the girls are taking yeast breads and canning this year instead of sewing.

The club decided to send a Memorial gift to an orphan home in memory of our leader's mother, Mrs. Hasse.

Plans were made for a public leap year dance to be held in the near future. The pep and enthusiasm of the girls, forecasts this year to be a very successful club year. A delicious lunch was served.

Dr. Clayton S. Enoch local dentist located in the Schreiber building has just installed a fine new dental equipment including an x-ray machine. The outfit is the very latest used in dental parlors and Dr. Enoch now has one of the most up-to-date dental parlors in this section.

Due to the inclement weather all work on the new Methodist church has been halted.

The last day for filing petitions for candidates for the local Board of Education is March 21st.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Elmore McArthur last Thursday, a son.

Miss Joyce McArthur, 12 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmore McArthur underwent an appendicitis operation in the Blue Island hospital last Saturday.

The Tinley Park school Achievement club will hold a meeting Friday of this week.

The Spring Farm Show held by the Lake-Cook Supply Co., last week in the Saenger Hall was interesting and largely attended.

The Village Board met Tuesday night. The session was a very quiet one, only routine business being transacted.

Special attention is called to the gold fish sale at the Tinley Park Drug Store. Read the adv. on the back page in this issue.

The Tinley Park Garden Club is to meet with Mrs. J. Klepper on Wednesday, March 20th.

Word comes from Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mancke who are spending a few weeks in Tucson, Arizona with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Schmutte, that the weather is warm and that Mr. Mancke is feeling better.

ORLAND PARK

Boy was it slick walking and driving Wednesday morning! Ashes, cinders, sand and salt were used to take the smoothness off the glare of ice which covered sidewalks and roadways. Many Orland people could not get their automobiles out of their driveways wherever such driveways had an incline. The state highway department was right on the job in placing cinders on hills and at intersections of the paved roads in this section. Some pedestrians used a novel means of support while walking on the icy walks by way of a cane with a sharp spike on the end of it.

The Adult Bible Class of the Orland Methodist church met in monthly meeting Wednesday evening.

The S.W. PTA Council will meet in the Orland Park public school at 8 p. m., March 19th. The election of officers will also be held.

The Council will meet on March 20th at 8 p. m., at the Cook avenue school in Oak Lawn.

Miss Betty Yunker was hostess to a group of friends and relatives in honor of her 16th birthday anniversary at the Creer hall Saturday evening. Dancing was the chief diversion. Refreshments were served. Miss Yunker received many pretty gifts.

The Orland Park R. N. A. and the R. N. A. Juveniles will meet in the Creer hall on the evening of March 28th.

The Ladies Guild of the Orland Park Methodist church will meet in the Creer hall the afternoon of March 28th.

The orchestra of the Orland Park Methodist church is preparing to present a program after Easter.

The choir of the local Methodist church will present the "Holy City" this coming Sunday night at the evening service. The public is most cordially invited. This presentation is very impressive and will be a real treat for not only music lovers, but for the general public as well.

The Orland Park Library is announcing the acquisition of the following splendid books:

Women: Helen Kones in "How to be Your Own Decorator" will give you a million fresh ideas for renovating your home this spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Kay who have been spending sometime in Arizona and other southwest points, have returned home. They report a most delightful trip and weather.

A BOLD STATEMENT

BY

Herman C. Grassle

Candidate on Republican Ballot for COUNTY AUDITOR

HE SAYS: "If I am elected to this office, it will not be necessary for the County to employ public accountants to audit the County books. This will be done as the law intends it shall be done—by the County Auditor's office. This will save taxpayers the thousands of dollars heretofore used (amounting to $26,127.00 during the past few years) to employ outside accountants to do the work that the County Auditor's office is paid to do.

"I believe that you, the voters and taxpayers of Will County, want this type of service, to which you are entitled—and I promise you honest and efficient service in this as in all other matters connected with the office, in return for your support during the campaign and your votes at the Primary Election."

Just why left-overs should be considered the problem children of the kitchen, is a mystery to me! They're a challenge to one's housewifely imagination, of course, but cleverly combined and judiciously seasoned, they may become a distinguished dish, around which to build an attractive and satisfying meal.

If they're served as left-overs there's nothing particularly inspiring about the little dabs of vegetables that accumulate in the refrigerator. But when they're seasoned with care, combined in a smooth, creamy cheese sauce, and served in an unusual bread ring, they become a totally new, delicious and nourishing main dish for a meal. Left-over vegetables combine, too, to create "vegetables a la king," or a hearty lunch or supper salad.

Odds and ends of vegetables and meat unite to make a meat loaf of distinction, and scraps of Sunday's roast can be used to advantage in tasty appetizers or "buffet supper rolls."

Even the bits of yesterday's cake and pie contribute to the success of today's dinner. Not-so-fresh cake, served with a hot sauce, becomes cottage pudding; from dry cake slices, dried or candied fruit, and a custard, a cabinet pudding is evolved; and that quarter of berry pie left over from last night's dinner is the basis of a truly delicious "Cinderella Dessert."

Left-overs are time and budget savers—much too important to be merely heated and served as "scraps." Use them wisely and well to add variety to meals, to save time, and to cut food costs.

Surprise Frankfurters.

(Serves 5-6)

2 1/4 cups mashed potato
1 egg (beaten)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon parsley (minced)
6 to 7 cold, cooked frankfurters
1/2 cup bread crumbs

Combine the mashed potatoes with the beaten egg and the seasoning. Cover each frankfurter with the potato mixture, forming a "blanket" about 1/4-inch thick. Roll in crumbs. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 20-25 minutes, or fry in deep fat (390 degrees) until golden brown.

Biscuit Meat Loaf.

(Serves 4-5)

1 cup carrots (chopped)
1/2 cup celery (chopped)
1/4 cup green pepper (chopped)
2 tablespoons onion (chopped)
2 cups left-over beef roast (ground)
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 recipe biscuit dough

Combine the vegetables, put through meat grinder and cook in 3/4 cup water until the vegetables are tender. Drain. Combine with meat, add seasonings, and form into a roll. Cover with biscuit dough and place in a shallow, greased pan. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 20-25 minutes. Serve hot, with left-over gravy.

Vegetable and Egg Croquettes.

1 cup mashed potatoes (left over)
1 cup peas
1 tablespoon onion (finely cut)
3 eggs (hard cooked and finely cut)
1 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1/4 cup butter (melted)

Combine the potatoes, peas, onion, eggs, salt and pepper and shape into croquettes. Arrange in shallow baking dish and brush with melted butter. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 15 minutes.

Buffet Supper Rolls.

Put left-over meat or fowl through the meat grinder, twice. Moisten with a little gravy, to spreading consistency. Make a batch of biscuit dough, and roll out to 1/4-inch thickness. Spread the meat on this and roll up like a jelly roll, to about 1 inch in diameter. Cut in 3-inch lengths. Place the rolls in a greased baking pan and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 15-18 minutes.

Sauce for Croquettes.

1/2 teaspoon brown sugar
2 slices onion (finely cut)
1/4 cup butter
1/4 cup flour
1 cup milk
1 cup bouillon stock
1 tablespoon raisins

Melt brown sugar in a skillet. Add onion and butter and cook until onion is slightly browned. Add flour and blend thoroughly. Add milk and bouillon stock and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Add raisins and serve with the croquettes.

Vegetables a la King.

(Serves 6)

6 slices bacon
1/2 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 cup mushrooms (canned or fresh)
3 cups milk
1/4 cup green pepper (chopped)
1/4 cup pimiento (chopped)
1 cup celery (chopped)
2 cups whole kernel corn

Cut bacon in small pieces, and cook until crisp. Stir in the flour, salt, and pepper, and blend well. Add mushrooms. Gradually add the milk, stirring constantly. Fold in remaining vegetables, and cook for 15 minutes over low heat, stirring frequently.

ly. Serve on buttered toast.

Cinderella Dessert.

With a fork, break up left-over pie or cake. Place in a buttered baking dish. Top with fruit (fresh, canned, or stewed), and add sugar if desired. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 25-30 minutes. Serve with custard sauce.

Left-Over Dinner Ring.

1/2 cup fat (melted)
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons onion (minced)
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
4 eggs (slightly beaten)
1/4 cup milk
1 cup peanuts (chopped)

Combine ingredients in order listed. Pack into a well-greased ring mold and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for about 30 minutes. Turn out onto large platter. Combine left-over vegetables in a cheese sauce and serve on the ring mold.

Of Course You Want a Copy of 'Household Hints'!

In spring a home maker's fancy turns to thoughts of crisp curtains, and clean, sparkling windows, rugs that are fresh and bright, and walls that aren't ashamed to face the light of a sunny day! That means housecleaning, of course, and all the odd jobs that go with it—what to do to make the dining room curtains last one more season, how to renovate the kitchen linoleum; or how to wash chintz window shades. You'll find the answers and other puzzling questions, in Eleanor Howe's useful booklet "Household Hints." To get it, just send 10 cents in coin to "Household Hints," care of Eleanor Howe, 919 N. 'Thank You, My Friend'

By MARTHA K. DAVIS
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

"I'M TERRIBLY sorry, Tom, but we are having the rector and his wife for dinner." I doubtless looked my disappointment.

Stranded for a few hours in a western city, I had happily bumped into an old college chum, Jerry Bosworth, whom I hadn't seen in years.

Of course nothing would do but I must go to his home for dinner. "Judy will be mighty glad to see you," he said heartily, and remembering pretty Judith Bosworth, I experienced a pleasurable anticipation at the thought of meeting her again.

"It will have to be 'eat and run,'" I said. "My train leaves at eight-forty and I simply have to make it."

I found Judith charming as ever and the thought of a few hours' visit with these old friends was decidedly gratifying.

Now—here was my hostess announcing the impending arrival of a boresome rector and his probably equally boresome wife.

"It's a perfect shame it happens this way," deplored Judith, "but you will enjoy meeting Nancy Rathburn, Tom. She isn't the ordinary 'rector's wife' at all. She is the most fascinating, interesting, delightful woman! Everyone adores her. How she ever happened to marry George Rathburn—I Really, I do not believe she could stand him if it weren't for her little periods of escape. Every spring she spends a couple of months abroad. She comes back more beautiful than ever, fairly aglow with enthusiasm, and plunges heart and soul into parish work. The things that woman accomplishes! Why—last winter—" but Judith's dissertation was interrupted by the arrival of her guests.

The Reverend George Rathburn was all that my hostess had implied. Pompous—conceited—arrogant! But for all his bluster, he quickly faded into insignificance.

Beautiful, quiet, poised Nancy Rathburn! The way she moved—her voice—no, the secret lay in that expression in her eyes. What were those fathomless, dreamy eyes seeing? Surely not her pragmatical little husband, or anyone or anything in Judith's cozy apartment.

I was glad to be placed beside her at the table, but the smallness of the party forbade any intimate conversation.

It was during the salad course that I noticed the ring on the third finger of her right hand. A flower cluster of diamonds embedded in black onyx, surrounded by a wreath of dull gold.

I was a fool for speaking.

"Your ring, Mrs. Rathburn—may I look at it? It reminds me of a ring a comrade of mine in the war—"

Nancy Rathburn's white hand clenched.

"Ah—show him your ring, my dear," broke in the rector. "Perhaps he can tell you something about it. You see, Mr. Neeland, my wife picked up that ring at some pawnshop over in London. It has some kind of insignia woven in the wreath. Guess some of the nobility got hard up, but they'd have a difficult time trying to buy it back." He guffawed loudly. "Mrs. Rathburn thinks more of that ring than all the rest of her jewelry put together. Sort of talisman, you know. Show it to him, Nancy."

I took in mine the hand she slowly extended. The fingers were like ice.

And as I looked down, I saw again a trench—a khaki-clad man, whimsical, gay, untouched by fear—heedless—cynical. "What does it matter, old man? Nothing can happen to me. It's all happened. You know—one of those arranged affairs. She doesn't give a damn whether or not I'm hit by a bloomin' shell. But there is a girl, Tommy! Oh, well—she's tied as tight as I."

There was a small piece chipped from the onyx.

I remembered about that. "By Jove—if I hadn't put up my hand, Tommy! Trust the 'House of Garland' to jolly well protect its sons of war!"

And then—convalescing in a hospital. Young Lord Garland—Dickie Garland calling frantically for—"Nannie! Nannie!"

Later—a firm hand-clasp. This ring cutting into my flesh. "Good-bye, Tommy, old man! Jolly luck! Take good care of yourself."

I looked up. Nancy Rathburn's eyes were enormous and her under lip was caught tight between her teeth. She was holding her breath.

I said, "No, the ring this reminded me of was—quite different. In fact, on close inspection, this is not like it at all."

I had to leave directly after dinner. Nancy Rathburn stood beside her husband. As I shook hands with her conventionally, I caught a faint little whisper—"Thank you, my friend."

Proxy Bride and Widow

The 23-year-old proxy bride of Wong Chin, 52 years old, traveled 9,000 miles from Hongkong to Liverpool to learn she was a widow before she had seen or spoken to her husband. Lonely, Wong had asked friends back home to find him a bride, marry them by proxy and send her to him. This they did, but until she walked down the gangplank the girl did not learn of his illness and death.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Energy Saver.—Keep a dry mop and duster on each floor of your house thus saving time and energy where cleaning.

To loosen dirt on linoleum add a few tablespoons of kerosene to the water with which it is to be washed.

Bottles containing cream or milk should never be left uncovered in the refrigerator. Odors from other foods are quickly absorbed by them.

Hotbeds and cold frames should be located in a sheltered place, either on a south slope, on the south side of a building, or where protected by a clump of low-growing pines.

Burnt Privet Hedge.—If your privet hedge should be accidentally burned during cleaning do not dig it up. Cut it back almost to the ground. New shoots will spring up and in another year you will have a fairly good hedge.

Suggested Dishes.—Hang a slate and pencil in your kitchen. Let the various members of the family jot down the dishes they would like to have as they think of them. At the end of the week you will have enough suggestions to plan your coming week's menu and please the tastes of all.

QUICK QUOTES

THE SOLUTION

"LET the people go to work and we need have no fear as to the solution of all our other ills. Keep people out of work for another decade or less and we shall have no democracy; but we shall have a demoralized and chaotic people; and we shall indeed have lost our priceless heritage of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."—U. S. Representative James C. Oliver.

NEW LENOX CLUB ADVOCATES FIRE PROTECTION

es of Cedar Road on the Rock Island crossing. It was pointed out that due to the unfavorable conditions existing at this location, it constitutes a hazardous crossing and that in addition to the flagman who is stationed there during school hours, that red flashers would be a great help in eliminating potential accidents and that by the installation of these lights lives may be saved. Mr. Whitaker is making investigations and a committee will be announced later who will discuss the matter with proper railroad officials and it is believed that in due time this worthy objective may be secured.

The members also discussed very eminent need of fire protection in the growing community and pointed out other communities some of which are not as large as New Lenox have fire protection and that with the proper effort in this connection it is possible that New Lenox could have this also. Frank Vally was appointed chairman of a committee which is to thoroughly investigate the possibilities of establishing fire protection for New Lenox. Definite arrangements were made and a complete report from this committee will be made at the next business meeting.

Mr. Cooper, chairman, gave business statistics and pointed out that 94% of the population of the United States lives in communities of not larger than 50,000 population and that 96% of income taxes were paid by the small business man. Therefore, it was with vested interest that small communities such as New Lenox should take definite steps in formulation of a course by which the conditions in the community could be improved and all residents of such communities would be thereby benefited. Mr. Cooper further pointed out that the New Lenox Men's Club has been in existence for more than two years and that they are proud to have a part in boosting their community and that their efforts in the past would be augmented by greater efforts in the future to make New Lenox a better community.

The club also made plans for a travelogue to be presented in the near future. Following the travelogue, there will be a luncheon served by the ladies of the women's auxiliary of Grace Church. The proceeds from this affair will be divided by the club and the auxiliary. In this connection Earl Roth, George Morris and John Spuehler were appointed as a committee to make complete arrangements for this coming event and public announcement will be made by them as to the time and place.

Following the adjournment of the business meeting a lunch was served by the program committee. It is understood from those present that this meeting was the high light in the development of the club and that the club has on their waiting roll several more candidates for membership.

Mr. Whitaker, the new president, states that he is happy to have been chosen president of this organization, and that his unlimited efforts will be extended in behalf of the welfare of the club and that with the cooperation of the members he is positive the development of many local improvements will be instituted and accomplished.

"It's Always Fair Weather" when you Go By Train

The season of unreliable weather is here. With this thought, we remind you that there's nothing like the comfortable interior of a fine train to make travel a positive pleasure.

Rain or shine, in fair weather or foul, the train gets you there on time.

Rock Island main line trains are so comfortable, with air-conditioning, luxurious parlor-lounge cars, and reclining seat coaches and chair cars, the wise traveler always goes by rail.

Information concerning fares and schedule will be gladly furnished at your request.

SHIP and TRAVEL

MOKENA

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to all relatives and friends who assisted us in our recent bereavement; for the floral offerings, Rev. Wilbur C. Christians for his comforting words, also those who so kindly donated their automobiles.

Jane Stellwagen, P. J. Stellwagen
A. C. Hatch, Geo. A. Stellwagen

Mr. and Mrs. James Egerton entertained at dinner last Sunday in honor of their son Richard and his birthday anniversary. Sixteen relatives were present as follows: Mrs. C. Dath, daughters Florence, Louise and Anita; Mr. and Mrs. N. Schultz and sons of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. George Dath and son of Mokena. Richard received many lovely gifts.

The officers of the Mokena Branch of the American Red Cross met one day this week and after having investigated the case of Mrs. Ella Krohn and family of five children whose home was burned to ashes a few weeks ago, decided the need of this mother was great, and therefore agreed to give her some assistance in rehabilitating her home.

Red Cross work is founded on immediate need and not what we have had, therefore this committee felt this was a case of need.

A TRUE STORY

The seemingly impossible has come true. We are able to offer an electric range at a price you can afford to pay. Now you can do your cooking the modern way, on an electric range.

No fumes, no blackened pots and pans, no soot, no danger. Electric cooking is fast, cheap, clean, safe—and it's automatic.

In order that the average housewife can enjoy preparing the family meals, we offer an all-porcelain base cabinet style genuine Frigidaire electric range at the unbelievable low price of only $99.50.

It has the same acid-resisting porcelain cooking top, the same exclusive Frigidaire 5-heat surface units, and the same extra large even heat baking oven as the higher priced models. Terms as low as $5.00 down and $4.50 per month. Get in touch with Clarence Beagley today, or telephone Orland Park 136-J-1. Adv.

MARLEY

Mrs. Loren Sass

Daniel Sass will have charge of the tonic at the Sunday Evening Club Sunday. Choir members are requested to attend practice at 6:45, next Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ulrich and son of Mokena were guests in the Edwin Bormet home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Marshall entertained at dinner Sunday in honor of the 56th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cleveland. Guests were: Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Cleveland and daughter Shirley of Orland; Mrs. Ernest Eaton and son, Mr. and Mrs. Mervin Moore and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cleveland of Tinley Park and Mr. and Mrs. Sigurd Olson.

Mrs. Mervin Moore and Mrs. Jesse Marshall attended the household shower in honor of Mrs. Wm. Savers in the Emilev hall in New Lenox Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Peter Smith, Mrs. Chris Froemke and Mrs. Charles Lauffer were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower in honor of their sister, Miss Vivian Helm, in the home of the latter, last Saturday afternoon. Two games were played and duplicate prizes were awarded to Mrs. Irma Helm and Mrs. Loren Sass. Mrs. Adolph Halev received the happy prize. The home was beautifully decorated in the bride-to-be's chosen colors, pink and white. After Miss Helm had opened her many useful and beautiful gifts, refreshments were served by the hostesses to approximately sixty guests.
